EMBALMING IN ITALY .- The principal Italian embalmers keep their special processes a secret, although the chief steps are well known. The process of embalming is stated to consist of five steps. First, cold water is injected through the whole circulatory system until it issues quite clear. This may take as long as five hours. Alcohol is then injected for the purpose of abstracting all the water from the body. This is followed up by the injection of ether, to dissolve out the fatty matter. This injection is carried on for several hours-in thin subjects for two, in very fat ones for even as long as ten hours. After this a strong solution of tannin is slowly injected, and full time is allowed for its soaking into all the tissues; this takes from two to five hours. Lastly the body is exposed for from two to five hours to a current of warm air, which is previously dried by passing it over heated chloride of calcium. The body can then be preserved for any length of time without undergoing change, and is as hard as stone.

A HORRIBLE CUSTOM .-- Among the barbarous customs that British rule has not yet suppressed in northwestern India is that of Samedh, or burying people alive. It appears that the Thakoor of a certain state sent an officer to a village called Uppi to collect certain revenues, and when he arrived the Siddhs refused to pay. As the officer insisted that they must pay, 150 of them. in order to intimidate him, collected before his door and threatened to commit suicide if he failed to give way. Still he held ont, and thereupon they selected two of their number for the sacrifice—a man aged seventy-five and a woman aged sixty-five— and on land onwed by the Thakoor buried them both alive. Certain of the villagers tried to prevent the deed, but were soundly punished for their trouble. Since the event occurred, twenty-seven of the Siddhs have been taken into custody, and nineteen have been sentenced to various terms of imprisonment.
